REAL EXPERIENCE & AWARDS

I don't give much attention to awards and contests. One of my works was selected on Behance for Web Design Served some time ago. The other one was marked on Re:Vision. And recently I participated in NASA Space Apps Challenge (Dnipro location), where our team project was noticed with a special award from NASA Earth Observing System.

Nevertheless, I can say that my clients are happy to work with me. They admit my abilities to understand their business needs and to convert them to the functionality that can automate and simplify their business processes.

For instance, I've made a major contribution in the ERP/CRM system for a language school franchise. It was a challenge and a great pleasure to structure the complex offline business processes and convert them into an online system. I've made many of the optimization offers that influenced much the accustomed offline processes of my client's business.

The other example is concerned with a big Bangladeshi company. It is one of the top garments accessories producers, B2B segment. My partner and I investigated deeply the client's business, its aims and goals, their customers, and environment. We visited the company facilities (factory area) and had a series of meetings with the management staff. As the result, we pulled out the implicit competitive advantages to mirror them on the new website and beneficially distance the client's company from its competitors.

I strive for the perfect interfaces that serve the purpose and solve the tasks of interaction. Therefore, they should be seamless, elegant in their simplicity, and understandable by the target audience by the light of nature. That's why I prefer the prototyping process in contradiction to making the burst-in-colors websites, and in my work I tend to simple and minimalistic style.

OWN PROJECTS

I have several personally or family run online business projects. In each of these projects my main tasks were to choose appropriate hosting and software (CMS+plugins), install and adjust it, make some SEO and SMO adjustments, do branding (and also naming), and, of course, think through UX/UI.

Frankly, I can't proclaim the state of these projects' UX/UI as "ideal". Nevertheless, the projects are working and have become leaders in their segments; all of them bring the real value to their users and generate quite decent income for the owners.

The concept of the project is highly flexible and universal so it can be easily adapted for almost any other sports, fitness, and even dancing spheres.

PERSONAL TRAITS & STRENGTHS

I believe my strong analytics skill is my main feature as well as my law+economics education and practical experience that give me the ability to understand the clients' businesses and goals.

I'm a kind person that prefers to avoid conflicts and find the compromise whether it is a discussion with a client or with a team member.

I'm an individualist. I can do in a team, of course, but I prefer to do some task my own way, if I'm sure it's the best, and then integrate it into the project.

I'm not much talkative. Sometimes it is hard for me to base my decision in a real-time discussion.

I'm a diplomatic person if it is needed, but I prefer to put things straight. I don't like to palter.

EXPECTATIONS

If one could ask what is my ideal workspace... Particular requirements for my ideal workstation are: two IPS "24-27 monitors 1920x1200 (or higher), Logitech B110, a SteelSeries mousepad, light weighted headphones with good basses, and Windows 7/10 on board. A productive modern hardware system is taken for granted. No smoking, no beer smell, and no loud music in the open space.

My ideal workday starts at 9:30 and ends at 17:30 with 1 hour of lunch break. My evening and weekend time is for my family or self-development/education time, therefore it's sacred.

I'm searching for a company where I can specialize and advance in UI/UX, or as they call it today product design. Preferably, with significant part of mobile application and/or online service projects.

THANK YOU FOR ATTENTION

Sincerely, Roman
